THRIFT OF GERMAN PEOPLE. Billions of Dollars in Home and Foreign Securities Held in the Fatherland.

The thrifty Germans are piling up wealth in the form of cash and securities at a rate which promises to make them of great importance as a creditor nation, according to a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In view of the information sent to the state department at Washington and lately given publicity, the course of the German government is sticking close to the British government on the silver question is not surprising.

Germany has to a marked degree the same interests that Great Britain has in opposing anything that tends toward inflation.

Herr Miquel, the Prussian minister of finance, according to the reports received by Secretary Gresham, estimates that the people of Prussia have at the present time $7,075,740,000 in stocks, bonds and loans.

It is calculated that 25 per cent of the wealth of Germany is invested in stocks and bonds and that this will probably rise to 40 or 50 per cent in the next generation.

Professor Schmoller, a leading authority on economies in the empire, estimates that of the 49,500,000 people who make up the German empire 2,500,000 to 4,000,000 are in receipt of incomes from invested capital, says of those about one-half hold public securities.

In Prussia, in the last ten years, the deposits in the savings banks are claimed to have augmented about $44,030,000 per annum, and throughout Germany probably $71,400,000 to $95,200,000, from which it is inferred that the German nation is laying up from $476,000,000 to $595,000,000 annually, one-half of which goes into securities.

In the last ten years there have been, in the aggregate, about $952,000,000 to $1,190,000,000 worth of foreign and $1,904,000,000 worth of domestic securities put upon the German market.

With reference to the question whether Germany is wise in taking so much foreign paper, Professor Schmoller remarks that it is a healthy symptom, and indicates a thriving state of the people, and that, although much money has been lost thereby, it has been, on the whole, a valuable experience and the means of placing the German stock exchanges on equal footing with those of London, Paris and New York.

A position which they did not occupy twenty-five years ago. The losses of the country from investments in foreign securities have been great, but they are argued to have been amply offset by the profits realized.

From 1850 to 1892 the Germans are reckoned to have made $238,000,000 in American and Russian securities alone, independent of all indirect benefits which may have accrued to the general business of the country through the connections made in the handling of such stocks and bonds.

Germany now holds probably $2,300,000,000 worth of foreign securities, which is presumably double what it possessed ten years ago.

The interest and dividends on these add about $119,000,000 of wealth annually to the country. This has a marked effect on the well-being of the country and its trade balance.

What the country has lost in recent years through unfortunate investments in foreign securities has probably been about $200,000,000, which, as remarked above, has been fully compensated for by gains made.

FACES. How They Become Shapened According to One's Calling.

It appears probable that the tailor's distinctive type of face may have been partially created by his habit of working his jaws concomitantly with his shears.

Let any one watch a person cutting a piece of tough material with scissors and he will see that the lower part of the face wags in rhythmic and spontaneous union with the blades.

Shepherds and farm laborers who join sheep-shearing gangs certainly acquire a different expression while engaged in this kind of work.

The cast of countenance by which one so easily recognizes a groom is partially explicable from the fact that the muscles which close the jaw and compress the lips are always called into play when we are asserting our will over that of a horse.

Nearly all jockeys and other horse men have a peculiar set of the mouth and chin, but I have been unable to distinguish any special characteristic about the eye or other part of the face.

It is instructive to compare the visage of the ruler of horses with that of the ruler of men. The horseman's face shows command in the mouth, the drill sergeant's in the mouth and the eye.

The last is undoubtedly the most effective instrument in exacting obedience from our own species. Here we get a hint of the cause of that want of dignity, that element of coarseness which is discernible in the countenances of some men and women who have much to do with horses.

The higher and nobler method of expressing authority is outweighed by the lower and more animal one.

Eggs and Poultry. According to the census the United States produced 457,000,000 dozen of eggs in 1879 and 817,000,000 dozen in 1893.

These figures are probably under the mark. At the figures given, however, the annual egg product of the United States amounts to $100,000,000.

If to this we add the value of the poultry sold we shall obtain a pretty high figure for the annual output of the department.

One authority has placed it at $300,000,000. In 1893 the entire wheat crop of the United States amounted to 396,000,000 bushels, worth less than $300,000,000.

THE OZONE PROCESS. Fresh Beef, Sweet and Sound, After Long Exposure in the Sun.

"How did you like the roast beef?" "Splendid; best I have had for a long while."

"Have some more?" "You bet. Give me some gravy, too."

It was at a dinner party of newspaper men, and the piece de resistance was a big roast of beef, tender and juicy, and cooked just right.

Everybody enjoyed it, but there was a hush on the company when the host said: "Gentlemen do you know that this roast of beef has been lying exposed to the sun for twenty-one days in a window?"

"On ice, though," exclaimed one of the gourmands with his fork extended midway between his mouth and his plate.

"No, sir," said the host. "No ice, or it would have been spoiled."

There were some wry faces until it was explained that the meat had been preserved by what is known as the ozone process, which consists of processing foods by permeating them into their innermost fibres with ozone gas, thus purifying and preserving simultaneously.

It is strange to observe, but meat so processed is not affected by the atmosphere. The explanation is that ozone is the purifying element of the atmosphere, and is that portion of it that gives life and health to our systems and this treatment prevents decomposition, which is simply the consumption of animal and vegetable matter by septic gases, accompanied by chemical action.

The process has been used by a number of hotels East and South and by some transportation companies. It is a new thing in the Northwest, however, says the Minneapolis Times, and it is not to be wondered at that the gentlemen at the dinner party were dismayed when told that they had been eating meat that had been exposed to the sun for three weeks.

It was undoubtedly true, however, as the written testimony of the butcher to this effect was produced when some question was raised as to the truth of the assertion of the host.

A Good Wing Shot. A schoolmistress in Australia sued three young men for breach of promise. Counsel for or them moved for a nonsuit on the ground that she was too much engaged.

The court seemed disposed to grant the motion, whereupon the plaintiff asked: "Judge, did you ever go duck shooting?"

"Judge, did you ever go duck shooting?" "Judge, did you ever go duck shooting?"

The judge, with the pride of a sportsman—Well, I should say so! Many's the time I brought down half a dozen at a shot.
